VOL. 14, NUMBER 65 MONESSEN, PA, SATURDAY, AUGUST 28, 1915 SIX CENTS THE WEEK

Curtis H. Gregg Is Making Strong Bid For Judgeship

Curtis H. Gregg of Greensburg, called at this office yesterday afternoon during his brief stay in Monessen and authorized his political advertising to appear in a later issue of this paper. Mr. Gregg is going right to the people with his idea as to the qualifications a man for the judgeship should possess. He is a lawyer of ususual ability and his practice has been of a very general character. During the big coal strike in Westmoreland county of 1910, he tried over 1,000 cases as counsel for the miners. He has been twenty seven years in the practice of the law and during all that time, he has been careful and painstaking.

Mr. Gregg is not the candidate of any faction or combination. He controls no political support, he buys none and he expects none, but he does expect the support of the great army of non partisan voters who believe that even handed justice is not written in the cold law, but is a part of the human soul. Mr. Gregg believes the application of the law is an individual process, for there is a minimum and maximum in the law, and the judge has almost absolute power. Mr. Gregg believes it is necessary for a judge to know the people in order to administer a full measure of justice, and this he does for he has a personal acquaintance in every section of the county. He is a man who places individual rights as sacred as property rights, and whether it is a lone single handed man or a big corporation at his bar, justice would be administered in accordance with the evidence rather than the influence. All in all he would protect society wherever the opportunity presented itself. This is expected of the courts.

Mr. Gregg proved his fitness as a public official while a member of congress. He took the floor on all the great questions before the house. He demonstrated his force of character and proved that he has a trained intellect, quick to think and act. In other words, he is able to accomplish. During his administration he introduced the bill which became a law providing for $90,000 of an appropriation for a government building for Monessen. The site has been purchased and the building will follow in due course of time. This was not a political pledge given. It was a duty performed to a constituency. His efforts while in Congress has brought to this town the sweet assurance that a handsome structure is soon to grace our municipality. In the face of this fact, the town almost unanimously helped to defeat Mr. Gregg for re-election. This was the gratification expressed for an honest service. But to show the real manhood of the man, Mr. Gregg went back to congress to finish his term and at every angle he worked with the town and the department in an effort to have every business detail for the building looked after before retiring from the office. While in their hearts no doubt, the people of Monessen feel grateful to Mr. Gregg, they have never given him substantial assurance of the fact.

He comes to the voters at this time asking for their support for his judicial nomination on the non partisan ballot. He is setting before them his opinions as to the qualifications of a judge and is giving a clear insight into his fitness for the office. In this paper next week his article entitled "A Little Talk on the Judgeship" will appear in full so that voters may acquaint themselves better with the candidate.

M. Meyers Died This Morning

Meyer Meyers, one of Monessen's oldest and most respected citizens died at 11·15 this morning, following a lengthy illness due to complications. He has been unconscious for the past five days and his death was expected at most any moment. Mr. Meyers was born in Bavaria, Germany in 1844 and came to America in 1861, locating in Philadelphia. At the time of his death he was 72 years of age and is survived by ten children, five boys and five girls. All are married with the exception of Samuel, at home, and Charles, who has been working at Canton, Ohio. Mrs. Meyers was called by death in November last, following a short illness.

Mr. Meyers came to this city about 18 years ago and established a most successful enterprise in the M. Meyers & Son clothing store. Despite his advanced years, Mr. Meyers was active and just recently returned from a long trip to the coast where he visited the exposition. He took ill after the trip and went to Atlantic City and Philadelphia to recuperate. While in Philadelphia he became ill again and was brought to his home here and was only relieved of his sufferings this morning.

The funeral will be in charge of the local Masonic order of which Mr. Meyers was a charter member. Services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at his late home on Donner avenue and the body will be taken to Philadelphia on the Pennsylvania train leaving Lock Four at 5:59 tomorrow evening.

Pleads For Death To Atone For Awful Crime

Duquoin, Ill., Aug. 28—Like a raving maniac, Joe Deberry, confessed slayer of his benefactress, Mrs. Jas. M. Martin, demands that he be given up to be lynched. He smites the bars of his cell, haunted by the victim of his awful deed. Deberry, who was a colored servant in the Martin family, has brough about a double tragedy, for the husband of his victim died suddenly from the shock of the murder.

A special session of the Jackson county grand jury has been called for next Monday to investigate the murder. Deberry is in terrible mental agony as the hour approaches for him to tell his story. He will be indicted for murder and will be given a quick trial. His confessions will figure largely in the evidence.

Mrs. Martin was the wife of a prominent attoreny in Murphysboro. Some time ago Deberry was sent to jail on complaint of her husband that he had stolen a ring form Mrs. Martin. Despite the theft, Mrs. Martin took such an interest in the convict that she secured his parole. Then to show her faith in the "honor" of a convict, she gave him employment in her household. She paid for her belief on July 30 when she was brutally beaten to death with a poker in the hands of the negro she had aided. To protect him from the mobs, Deberry was taken to the jail here.

On August 14th, Attorney Martin, husband of the victim, dropped dead at West Badon, Ind. He was years old and had gone away seeking relief from the shock of the tragedy.

"I did not try to rob Mrs. Martin; I went up stairs to kill her," was the confession made by Deberry to the police. "I was crazy with drinking gin. She made me mad by asking me to wash the dishes when I wanted to go down town."

Since his confinement in jail, Deberry has pleaded for death, for any relief from the ghosts that haunt him. "They can cut me to pieces, they can have me eaten by the dogs, they can hang me, burn me, shoot me dead, and I won't say nothing. But let them get it over quick.

Blind Tigers Are Raided By Officers

The illegal liquor raid instituted by District Attorney C. Ward Eicher of Westmoreland county has reached to Monessen as well as every other section of the county. Evidence is in the hands of the prosecuting attorney, it is said, that will send some of the distributors of the foul demon rum over the road for a number of years. Special officers are doing the work and successful raids have been made.

Antonio Patti and Mrs. Lauretta Grololło, charged with illegal liquor selling were committed to the Grensburg jail. Later they secured bail and were liberated to await trial at the August term of court. It is said the officers will swoop down upon other dennizons here and get the guilty parties when the proper time comes. The object is to put the "Blind Tigers" out of business. It is one of the most sweeping reform movements ever instituted by a district attorney of Westmoreland county and Mr. Eicher is being commended by the good people of the county.

Good Program

The Metro features judging from the first three features exhibited already at the Olympic are holding the leading field among moving picture producers and are destined to conquer. Although every one of the three was of high merit, we must accept that the first one featuring Olga Petrova, "The Heart of a Painted Woman" with her beauty as a model, and her actions held the audience spell bound and deadly still that you could hear a pin drop. The same can be said about the best feature shown yesterday at the Olympic—the powerful dramatic star, Edmund Brese in the gripping play of the show world, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," taken from the powerful classic of the same name by Robert W. Service. It was one of the most wonderful pictures ever seen at the Olympic. Every motion, every act and every scene shown was in a most graphic manner and were above criticism. The picture was thunder striking; very interesting and educating indeed and it is certainly a credit to our town for such high class productions. The next Metro production for Friday, Sept. 3 is Emily Stevens in the story of a redeemed primadona "Cora" in five acts.

—Today at the Olympic—"A Dip in the Water," Joker comedy featuring Max Asher and Gale Henry. 1t

Auto Racers Made Fast Time On Track Yesterday

Those who attended the automobile races at Belle Vernon yesterday were treated to a real thrill in the last event, the free for all hanicap, when G. B. Gardner, driving his Beaver Bullett went through the high board fence around the track and landed with his mechanic in a corn field. The Beaver Bullett and Packard Greyhound were started on the scratch in this event and after a neck and neck race for several miles, the Bullett with a slight lead was forced on the outside of the track and in making a turn skidded and before she could be righted, had gone through the fence tearing a hole the size of the car. The machine was only slightly damaged and neither the driver nor mechanic injured. The crowd rushed out on the track, thinking a serious accident had occurred and the race was postponed.

The best time of the afternoon was made in the mile trial heat, for the free for all by the Beaver Bullett in 1:10 2-5. The Packard Greyhound with C. D. Johnson driving was second in1:13 seconds; the Yellow Kid Buick driven by M. J. Huhdoc, third with 1:13 4-4, the June Bug Ford driven by Guy Woodward, fourth in 1:14 seconds and the Wild Cat Buick with A. D. Spencer driving, fifth in 1:15 3-5.

In the three mile event open to cars of 231 to 450 cubic inches, displacement, Spencer's Wild Cat Buick made the best time and took first money with a record of 3:53 4-5. The Beaver Bullet was second in 3:54 and the Yellow Kid Buick third in 3:54 1-5, only two fifths of a second separated the first and last car in this race.

In the 3 mile event for cars of 450 cubic inches displacement or under the Beaver Bullet won out in 3:46 4-5. The Yellow Kid Buick was 2nd and the June Bug Ford, third, Spencer's Wild Cat Buick was forced to drop out with engine trouble. The best time in the three mile event was made in the free for all by Monahan in his Packard with a record of 3:42 2-5. The Beaver Bullet was second and Spencer's Wild Cat Buick third.

In the Australian pursuit race, the Packard Greyhound was the winner, passing the Yellow Kid Buick and the June Bug Ford at the end of the seventh mile. The Beaver Bullet was forced out with a punctured tire.

Some Peaches

This sanctum is indebted to H. Dallas McCabe for the finest specimen of fruit that has been dumped in on us so far this season. A peach of the Champion variety was presented to the editor this morning from the Grandview peach farm of Mr. McCabe. It tips the scales at one half pound and is perfect in shape, and in reality is a peach of a peach. It is estimated that the crop from this farm this year will total 250 bushels and the fruit is all of the finest kind and the most favored varieties.

Green Corn--How to Eat it

The world is able to classify a man by two things—his table manners and the style of his hand baggage. For instance, if in your travels you encounter an individual at a hotel who can cover his knife with mashed potatoes to the hilt and then get them all off without injury to his tonsils, you immediately have that man's social number. On the other hand, if he carries a canvas telescope or "knee knocker" reinforced by a part of his wife's clothes line, then you are also able to classify him properly.

You may have an inkling of a man's "bringing up" by the tools he chooses in eating his pie, or by the manner in which he muffles his exhaust in eating soup. Yet when it comes to green corn, every known rule is violated.

Some ways for eating certain things are planned for economic reasons. Thus the country hotel keeper serves his olives in a bottle and expects you to get them out with your fingers. He also furnishes you with possibly a grape fruit or orange in the morning and expects you to keep your ears clean with a paper napkin. There are recognized ways of taking soup into the system and these ways all call for a limit to the noise zone.

But when folks, even the most refined folks—folks that won't even permit a poodle to sleep with them—start in on their boiled corn part of the menu, past precedence is thrown to the winds. The book of rules is consigned with all other etiquet to a warmer place and every man is content to get his corn off the cob in the fastest and most convenient way in which he is able to operate.

No neighbor, we shall never have to worry about any styles relative to denuding the cob of its succulent kernels. We may have worried whether it is proper to remove jelly from the nose with a fork or napkin, and it may have annoyed us a few to remember whether it is better form to sneeze under or over the table, but we shall never have to tax our brains on new rules for eating green corn from the cob. It is a catch-as-can proposition, and the hair lipped farm hand is just as refined and just as mannerly as this delectable pursuit as the guy who learned his table manners from a young woman's seminary.

The Brute in Man

Over the wires to the telegraph editor came some dots and dashes telling these two stories:

From New York City: When a false cry of fire was raised aboard the steamer Grand Republic, a panic started. Many women and children were knocked down and injured in a mad rush by men to get life preservers and life boats.

From Kansas City: In making a rush to obtain seats in a street car at the entrance to Fairmont park, several men knocked down a woman and child. The two were severely injured.

Undoubtedly these men, at other times, are perfectly sane and civilized. They wouldn't harm a hair on a little child's head—if that child didn't stand in their way to a street car seat or a life preserver.

Civilization has done much for the animal that wears trousers and walks like a man—but it has left enough of the brute instincts in him to make him think of himself nine times out of ten.

A Strong Candidate for County Treasurer

WILLIAM H. ROSE

William H. Rose, of Greensburg, is a candidate for County Treasurer. He is a son of the late C. J. Rose. He was born and reared on a farm in East Huntingdon Township. Going to Greensburg about 16 years ago when his father moved to the county seat.

He was formerly engaged in the real estate and insurance business there and for the past six years has been in the automobile business. The Rose family is one of the oldest and best known families in the Southern part of the county. They have been staunch supporters of the Republican party ever since the party has existed, and none of its members has ever held or asked for county office.

Mr. Rose appreciates the importance of the office, the time and attention it requires, and if elected, he pledges his most earnest and continued efforts to discharge its duties faithfully.

To Assist in Court

Judge W. T. Ruppel of Samerset county, will assist the Westmoreland county judges, Doty and McConnell the second week of the August Quarter Sessions court. Judge James W. Boutan of McKean county has been asked to serve in Westmoreland county this term, but a telegram received by Judge A. D. McConnell Thursday morning stated that Judge Boutan would be unable to occupy the bench in this county at this time.

The great list of more than 300 cases and the absence of Orphans' Court Judge Charles D. Copeland makes it necessary for a third judge to hear the cases. The District Attorney's office has been hard at work on the preparation of cases for the August term. Attorney Edward Kennedy will assist District Attorney C. Ward Eicher, C. E. Heller and George E. Barron in the trial of the long list.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Broken Coin

A Story of Mystery and Adventure

By EMERSON HOUGH

From the Scenario by Grace Cunard

(Copyright, 1915, by Wright A. Patterson)

suspect that she had part of the coin—and it was easily seen by any that once she did have that part—might they not undertake to make trouble for their own purposes with her?"

"But what good would come of that?"

Count Frederick saw that his argument had gone too far for his own purposes. He did not care to tell the king all he knew, yet his zeal for Kitty had led him far.

"Much good might come to Grahoffen's war department, your majesty, if they knew our secrets Perhaps they thought she could give some information"

"But you do not predict trouble between us and our neighbor—you do not mean war?"

"Your majesty, I predict nothing these days, but always it is well to be prepared"

"You disturb me sorely—do not speak to me of war—I cannot endure the thought—I do not wish to hear of it."

As it chanced much of this conversation came to the ear of one of Sachio's agents, the spy Bartel, still hanging about the city of Gretzhoffen. He overheard enough in his passing by at the time of this conversation to be advised that the king of Gretzhoffen intended to make search for the missing American Not hesitating, he himself now sped off for his employer to communicate this news that he had learned.

He found Sachio aloof and discontented, out of favor in the court, and somewhat at a loss what next to do

At the thought of a definite demand on the part of King Michael—or rather on the part of Count Frederick—upon their kingdom for the person of the young girl, Sachio grew somewhat grave. "This," said he, "is a matter for the king."

But the king was in no too good humor over all these failures.

"What, Sachio," said he, "you come to me once more with these old woman's tales? If your time is so short before your secret is discovered, then all the more reason for diligence on your part. It is not the business of kings to accept reasons for failure in performance. The girl is still available—complete your errand with her—bring to me the reading of the coin. I know well enough that if Count Frederick comes he will be different from his king"

Therefore once more Sachio went back to his bootless interviews with Kitty, once more pleading with her to give him all knowledge she had of the coin. And once more Kitty could no more than reassure him of her own ignorance of what he wished to know.

She heard odds and ends of information which taught her which way the wind sat at Grahoffen capital. Sometimes she heard Sachio, again Bartel, again this or that man, speaking freely of the plans at hand.

"I told the king," said Bartel one time, speaking to Count Sachio, "that all is ripe for the shaking of the tree. I told him that we have full plans of all their fortifications and defenses—that their resistance will be but nominal. Once we get the Gretzhoffen coffers opened, times will be easier in our country."

"Yes, once you do," rejoined Sachio grimly. "But tell us how!"

Kitty, really owing allegiance to neither of these kingdoms, both of which had done her such repeated injustice, hardly stopped to ask herself why she found her own leanings towards Gretzhoffen, the scene of most of the indignities she had met.

She must escape for every reason—so she assured herself. But how?

From the windows she had a full view of the well-kept grounds of the palace and of the boulevards surrounding it. She stood alone one day staring out on scenes grown familiar to her. But all at once her gaze grew more intent, fixed upon some object not far away. A car was standing at the curb She did not remember to have seen it there regularly.

The two giant grenadiers to whom had been assigned the duty of watching after her in her wanderings regarded her as little more than a child, and they smiled as now she pushed past them through the door which led out to the gardens. She walked out to the car which stood at the curb, regarding it curiously, as though it were the first car she had ever seen in her life—something very far from true.

What the guards, who smilingly regarded her through the windows, saw was a swift leap of the girl to the driver's seat, her rapid movements with the controlling levers as she cut on the spark, gave the car gas, threw in the clutch, threw open the throttle, and drove away, the cut-out muffler roaring her own defiance to pursuit.

Hue and cry now through all the halls of Grahoffen palace, and general uproar. Count Sachio, never too far away, was promptly on the spot. When he saw what had happened he cursed the two grenadiers with all his ardent soul. Even the king, himself, aroused from his midday slumbers, joined in these scenes of excitement.

"What has happened—what is all this about?" he demanded.

The trembling guards scarcely dared tell him the truth.

"What, she has escaped—that prisoner! She was of more importance than any held here in our own remembrance. You shall all be held to account for this. How now, Count Sachio, did we not give her into your immediate charge?"

"Your majesty, you did. I dare no explanation of her escape. Only—she is gone."

"And with her our only hope of success in the ambitions of this kingdom. You seek to explain that to me" After her, dullard, and bring her back in twenty-four hours—or else do not return. You guess my meaning, Sachio?"

Kitty Escapes From the Palace.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Again in Gretzhoffen.

Pursuit? Kitty laughed at the thought as she felt under her the strong pulse of the great machine

She had taken the driver's seat, and as the car was of left-hand drive, for the time she had no opportunity to look into the tonneau, had she liked Listening to the swift purr of the smooth motor, she did not at first hear the sound of a chuckling laugh back of her in the car—a chuckle which at length broke out into a hearty gust of laughter.

She turned her eyes swiftly at risk of capsizing the car—and found herself gazing directly into the face of the man whom of all others she would most have preferred to see.

Even now he came crawling across the top of the seat to join her in the front of the car

"Roleau!" she exclaimed, "Is it indeed you? Are you always to be the deus ex machina in all my difficulties—literally you are that now!"

"I do not know what you mean by that, excellency," said Roleau, as he took the steering wheel from her, "but I have been in this machine for some time. I was satisfied that did you escape from the palace you would need a means of getting away All I needed to do was to wait patiently. So you have come. As soon as I could make my own escape I secured this car—a good one—and I followed. It was very simple, as you see."

"At least a near squeak this time, Roleau," said Kitty. "They never meant for me to escape."

"They do not mean it now, excellency," said Roleau, nodding behind him, where he knew pursuit even now was beginning. "I will drive now as I have never driven before. 'Tis a sweet engine, and it rides well. They will drive fast who follow us."

All of which was so literally true that before long the desert miles once more had sped beneath them and Kitty found herself again in the city she was more than ever disposed to call her home. They found entrance to the Ritz hotel at the rear door, in view of their own travel-stained condition

"Excellency," said the grieved and pained clerk, when at length she made her way to the desk, "I was on the point of removing your belongings and making other arrangements for your apartments."

"By what right?" demanded Kitty. "They are paid for in advance—why should they not be ready for me when I come?"

"But we did not hear when you would return."

"There are many things one does not hear—perhaps you may hear very little of my own business and my plans. I pay for service here. Please care for me, therefore, and my man—we both are tired"

"You have been inquired for in your absence, excellency. The Count Frederick of Gretzhoffen—"

"Indeed, and what could he want?"

"He has been here twice, excellency, but yesterday he came the last time. He said he came on message of the king—which gave me warrant for what he asked"

"And what was that?"

"Access to your apartments. He said it was the command of the king."

"And you dared give him such access?"

"We dared not do less, excellency. He was most courteous in one way—asked many questions regarding yourself; but as to search of your apartments he made none, or next to none. He seemed to care for nothing that he saw, save one little picture, a portrait."

Kitty remained but briefly in her own rooms.—She took a swift glance about. Everything seemed in place, much as she had left it—no search apparently had been made of any of the cabinets or drawers There had been a little picture—one of herself—left on the dressing table. It was gone! She missed nothing else.

CHAPTER XXXII.

In the Name of the King.

It was plain enough to Count Sachio which way Kitty would head in her flight. Her car was little more than out of sight on the Gretzhoffen road ere Sachio himself was in pursuit.

Count Sachio himself was no blunderer, and no common thief chaser, but a courtier and a man of intelligence He knew it would be futile to make a direct demand of the hotel management regarding the whereabouts of the young American Therefore while he himself approached the hotel desk to engage the clerks in conversation he sent two of his own men—one of them Bartel, the spy, who had been established here so long—by way of a rear stairway to find Kitty's room and report to him what they learned

He stood for some time making polite speeches with the desk men and the porters, asking for certain information as to routes and distances, but all the time burning with impatience that he heard no report from his messengers As he stood, there came news of them—startling news enough There came shrieking down the stairs incoherent, babbling, a maid who called out to the clerk, or to any who would hear her!

"A man," she cried—"A man—killed in her room—the young American's room—murdered—it is murder, I tell you!"

The officials of the hotel took prompt action.

"Close all the doors," ordered the porter. "Clear the corridors at once in the king's name Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be Have the gendarmes come at once. You boy—run I say."

It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet

As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick

She entered softly, leaving Roleau as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion Once more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its disorder had been removed. Spick and span in military neatness the apartment lay before her.

Upon the dresser, in full view, openly displayed, was a picture in a little frame—a frame of silver set in brilliant gems. She looked at it suddenly—it was the portrait of herself which once had stood on her own dressing table in her hotel! Now it was here. Why? Kitty felt a strange flush come to her face.

Something now arrested her—she paused, reluctant to resume a search which ever had been distasteful to her. No, she would not touch a thing—had he not done as much for her—had he not been more respectful than herself of another's privacy? If he had taken anything from her apartments it was but—this. And apparently he had cherished it. No, she would not search for the coin. She would leave this country disappointed, if need be

But there lay, just at the foot of the little portrait, an object which caught her eye. It was the half coin of Gretzhoffen!

Yes, here it was in full view, openly displayed, that any might see it who liked, who chanced to be there. Apparently Count Frederick felt that all pursuit of the coin had ended—that no longer could any intruder gain access to his palace.

Kitty hesitated for a moment. The appeal of the coin came to her once more. She took it up, held it in her hand, gazed at it—and once more, as so often had been the case—she found herself surprised at the very moment of her success.

She heard Count Frederick's quiet footsteps, his calm voice behind her.

"Mademoiselle, again!"

The count stood there regarding her.

"Evidently, mademoiselle, you did not realize that these repeated visits rendered necessary the installation of an electric system of my own devising—you see, I knew of your presence, and as you see, I have come. You rang. Of what service can I be, mademoiselle?"

"Leave me alone," panted Kitty, her face hot, tears almost in her eyes "I hate you! I hate you!"

"I grieve at that, mademoiselle," said Count Frederick evenly "I wish I could say the same of you—but I cannot. With every reason to distrust you—I cannot Continually we cross swords, do we not? And you were easy to deceive this time See—you are trapped as simply as a bird which steps into its cage without hesitation

"Will you not give me back my coin, mademoiselle? Will you not add it to the other? Will you not assist me in reading the message of the coin, so that we may make an end of all this—so that we may not continually cross swords with one another?"

In answer Kitty darted past him, found her way into the hall, ran she knew not where. Before her lay a little narrow stairway, and she sprang up it, hoping to find egress somewhere Alas! the door that closed the head of the stair was locked She heard his low laugh as an iron grille snapped across the opening, cutting off escape.

"Won't you give it me now—my coin?" he asked.

Silence reigned in the great white marble palace of Count Frederick of Gretzhoffen.

And now, far off in other parts of the city, where men sought one who had done a crime, there rose in the streets the sound of hurrying feet, with the warning cry, "In the name of the king"

ARE WE UP-TO-DATE?

You would say that the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, California, was up-to-date, wouldn't you? The texts on bookkeeping, shorthand and Penmanship used in the Standard Commercial School at the Panama-Pacific Exposition are the same as those used in the Douglas Business College.

These books were selected by men with national and international reputations—men who had no "Axe to grind." They selected the best because it was the best, and because it was up-to-date.

The Douglas College has always kept in step with the march of progress. Obsolete methods have been discarded and new and better ones adopted as they are discovered.

If you want the best in commercial education—a training that will enable you to forge your way to the front, out-classing all rivals, then enroll in this school.

Experienced teachers, modern equipment, up-to-date methods and thorough instruction will soon fit you for a desirable position. The cost is nothing compared with your increased earning power as a Douglas graduate.
